Told With a Kiss. I know not how it happened,
Or what I had to say
But clouds hid all the sunshine
On my darling's face that day,
I longed to ask forgiveness
For bitter words of mine,
But pride was fierce stubborn,
And so I gave no sign.

I saw the swift tears falling Upon my darling's cheek,
And then the grieved lip quivered
With words she did not speak. Then something whispered to me "What better way than this?

Go tell her that you love her, And tell it with a kiss!" "Dear heart!" I cried, "I love you! Forgive the words I spoke." Across her face the sunshine Through summer showers broke "I'm most to blame," she whispered,
"For what h's gone amiss."
And the troubles of the morning
Were ended in a kiss.
